Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is the concept that a company should play a good role in the community and take into account the environmental and social consequences of business actions. It is directly related to sustainability (producing economic, social, and environmental value) and ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance). All three are concerned with non-financial variables that firms of all sizes should consider when making business decisions.

In recent years, there has been a transition from corporate social responsibility to social purpose. Many businesses have shifted from a community investment strategy and a "nice to have" perspective to a holistic approach in which their mission is embedded in everything they do.

CSR can encompass a wide range of techniques and efforts, from sustainable practices to community involvement. Customers are increasingly expecting organisations with whom they do business to act responsibly. Following an amendment to the Companies Act, 2013, in April 2014, India became the first country in the world to make corporate social responsibility (CSR) mandatory. As part of any CSR compliance, businesses can invest their revenues in sectors such as education, poverty, gender equality, and hunger.

According to Ministry of Corporate Affairs data, South India, Corporate Companies spent 4048 Crore Rupees approximately on CSR Projects, where in India last financial year 50,000 crore was estimated to be spent on CSR project and it is rapidly increasing and it is 1 lakh crore projected to be next year so this sum and making the world a better place is in the hands of NGOs.

South India has established numerous opportunities for NGOs to access corporate money through the mandated Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) requirement that applies to specific firms. This is an opportunity to learn from the foremost expert on what NGOs must do to comply with the law's legal and reporting obligations. In order to address CSR needs, an expert will show how NGOs may work with a clear goal, a work strategy, and a reliable method to implement the plan. the opportunity to learn how to apply for and qualify for financing, as well as how to meet reporting requirements and produce utilisation data if you have received funds.
